Understanding Cookies, Web Beacons, and Other Tracking Technologies

We, our service providers, and other companies we work with may deploy and use cookies, web beacons, local shared objects, and other tracking technologies for various purposes, such as fraud prevention and monitoring our advertising and marketing campaign performance. Some of these tracking tools may detect the characteristics or settings of the specific device you use to access our online services.

"Cookies" are small amounts of data a website can send to visitors' web browsers. They are often stored on the device you are using to help track your areas of interest. Clear GIFs, pixel tags, or web beacons—typically one-pixel, transparent images located on a web page or in an email or other message—or similar technologies may be used on our sites and in some of our sites our digital communications (such as email or other marketing messages). They may also be used when you are served advertisements or otherwise interact with advertisements outside our online services. These are principally used to help recognize users, assess traffic patterns, and measure site or campaign engagement.

Local Shared Objects, sometimes referred to as "flash cookies," may be stored on your hard drive using a media player or other software installed on your device. Local Shared Objects are similar to cookies in terms of their operation but may not be managed in your browser in the same way. For more information on managing Local Shared Objects, click here

Online Advertising

You may see advertisements when you use many of our online services. Which advertisements you see are often determined using the information we or our affiliates, service providers, and other companies we work with have about you, including information about your relationships with us (e.g., types of accounts held, transactional information, location of banking activity). To that end, where permitted by applicable law, we may share the information we collect from and about you with others.

When you use a link online to visit a third-party website, you will be subject to that website's privacy and security practices, which may differ from ours. It would be best to familiarize yourself with the linked third-party website's privacy policy, terms of use, and security practices before providing any information on that website.
